

Washington, D.C.—Today, over 100 House conservatives—who have worked closely with President Donald J. Trump to advance the America First agenda—endorsed Andy Barr to be the next Senator from Kentucky. They join President Trump’s allies including U.S. Senator Markwayne Mullin (R-OK), U.S. Senator Ted Budd (R-NC), House Majority Leader Steve Scalise (R-LA), Conference Leadership Chair Elise Stefanik (R-NY), Dean of the House Hal Rogers (R-KY), and U.S. Congressman Ronny Jackson (R-TX) who served as President Trump's WH Physician in his first-term in backing Barr.

“Andy Barr has always stood shoulder to shoulder with President Trump to fight for the MAGA agenda that Kentuckians voted for. Andy helped us write and guide the Big Beautiful Bill into law, the largest tax cut and border security bill in history,” the Members said in a joint statement. “Andy Barr is a proven conservative leader, a relentless fighter for the MAGA movement, and someone you can always count on when it matters most. He will be a strong voice for Kentucky and a great United States Senator, and we are proud to endorse him.”

Barr announced endorsements from 107 House conservatives, including thirteen current House Committee Chairmen and the Vice-Chair of the House Republican Conference. The full endorsement list is below:
